

GLANMIRE PARISH

28th May 2017

The Ascension of the Lord

burned a saint.” Martin Luther King, Jr. was ridiculed as a radical, a rabble-rouser, and a dangerous Communist in his lifetime, but is hailed today as a prophet. Maybe that’s what Jesus had in mind when he turned his eyes toward heaven and prayed, “Father, the time has come; glorify your Son, that your Son may glorify you.” The one who endured the shame of the cross brought salvation to a broken world. It was in their death that the great ones found their glory.

Finding their glory

There is a familiar anecdote in the life of St. John Maria Vianney, the “Cure D’Ars.” He used to notice a peasant standing in front of the tabernacle in the village church every morning on his way for farm work. One day he asked him, “What do you do here every morning?” The man answered very simply: “I look at God and God looks at me.” The Cure D’Ars liked to repeat this story: “He looked at God and God looked at him: this says everything about genuine prayer, my children!”

William Barclay says “It was in their death that the great ones found their glory.” Joan of Arc was burned as a witch and a heretic by the English. But some people left the scene saying, “We are all lost because we have
