Warnings ignored

Some years back, New York Times Magazine showed a series of photographs of a rock formation in Yosemite National Park near Bridal Veil Falls. A prominent sign in yellow plastic was attached to the rocks, which clearly said: "Danger. Climbing or scrambling on rocks and cliffs is extremely dangerous." One picture showed a woman walking on the rocks in a tight dress and high heels. Another showed a couple walking on the rocks; the man was carrying his dog apparently because he thought it was too slippery for the dog. Another showed a man carrying a month-old baby in his arms while walking on the rocks. What causes us to ignore clear warnings? Why do folks rip the plastic cover off a pack of cigarettes when all of us know the warning by heart that smoking kills? Why do people remove the safety shield from power saws? Why do people ignore their doctor's warnings about being overweight and under-exercised? Why do entire civilizations ignore warnings about pollution or the revolutionary pressures that economic and political injustice create? Today's Gospel gives another example of ignored warnings.
