Reflection

During the time of Jesus, nobody considered the opinion of a child to be of any value. However, Jesus knew and recognised that children frequently see the truth more clearly than adults. Children are generally more open to the truth than older people who let their opinions and ideas and actions be shaped and molded by the latest trends in social and political life.

Consequently they will sometimes justify the unjustifiable. Why have children and adolescents grasped the need for protecting the environment while adults keep finding excuses for doing little or nothing.

Jesus completely recognised children's ability to see the truth and he was trying to encourage them and get adults to listen to them.
